THE EDITORS TOUR

Cedar Creek Canon, Visit to the Silver Mines.

Continuation from last week.

We left our party resting last week at the Iron Springs Pavilion after we had survived the wonderful descent from the towering Pikes Peak. The roll was called by Pres. Pursell and alas! called by missing. A pall of sadness came over us. Was it possible that they had strayed away from friends and fallen from off some rocky cliff down in the fathomless gulch below?

Pictures flitted through our minds to that effect. Or in their ambition had they endeavored to build a toboggan slide and were lost in the snow? Plan to our eyes came the picture that we used to study in the third reader of the goodly dog dragging from the drifted snow on the mountain top, a pale and ghastly "hollow corpse" (copy righted.)

The mountain passenger agent assured us that he would send an extra train up the little hill five or six miles again, with a rescue party on it and that all would be well. Thereupon we were well again, our raving pains slowly left us. We repaired to our car for repairs. Each was carrying three or four tons of granite from off the Peak which we wished to take home to build a house of. This made good ball in the hull of our car. We were to bid farewell to Manitou at five o'clock P. M. and as the hour approached we became very anxious concerning the lost ones. Several of us walked back to the Iron Springs pavilion a distance of three miles, to inquire of the cog rail road official if he had heard any thing of our beloved. Here however we met four of the lost party who had come down the mountain on the extra sent up for them but they knew nothing of the others. The officials told us that there were no more trains run that night and that the lost, strayed or stolen would needs walk down from the towering cliff, a distance of several miles. We pleaded that they prevailed and nothing was left us but to return to our car and get warm water and hot poultices for the pedestrians.

A few minutes before our train pulled out, they came. They had walked all the way. Streaks of gray had found places in their hair. Their shoes were bursting from their feet and they were real tired, and wished they were home. But the car was as good as home to them and every measure was taken for their comfort. When they were at last in the arms of sleep, we even walked on tip toe to keep from waking them, with the train running 45 miles an hour. We had seen the lights and were on our way back to Denver. The tall spires in the "Garden of the Gods" faded in the distance as we receded and the drifted snow on Pikes Peak became more like fleecy clouds flitting in the blue sky, than the icy cloak that it was.

The picture was still on our minds as it is yet, but the reality gone from us, perhaps forever. We were now on the Rio Grande, a smooth, bed, elegant road, with train officials courteous and gentlemanly. From Colorado Springs to Denver, a distance of perhaps fifty miles, the Rio Grande and Colorado Midland, both powerful western roads run almost parallel. It happened that our train and one on the other road left the Springs at the same time and a race of fifty miles was before us. Here was the distance was run in this way when suddenly our high train threw herself forward like a frightened steed and we waved farewell to the other as we left them miles behind.

We rolled into Denver just in time for a good supper which we most heartily relished. After supper we were met by those noble and esteemed gentlemen Mr. Cooper, the millionaire editor of the "Denver Republican" and Mr. Faber of the "Colorado Farmer" and "Colorado Sun." They assured us that the theaters of the City were open to us and that they would take pleasure in escorting us to them. Our party divided, half going to the Grand and half to the Taber theater, where the most popular and most elegant plays were witnessed. At the Taber, Nellie Free appeared in a very prominent part and a low applause of pleasure could be heard among us "Buckeyes" to see a beautiful girl from our native state winning fame in the far west. We voted the evening's entertainment a grand success and felt that the western cities are climbing to the top of the stage theatrically as well as exciting the stage of activity. Life With hearts full of joy we returned to our car to recline on the bosom of Sleep. Morning broke on Tuesday with its usual premeditated brightness. At 8 o'clock our gentlemanly newspaper friends met us and had arranged for us to take a special observatory car on the mountain narrow gauge road, through the Cedar Creek Canon, over the top to Silver Plume and Silver Mines. We traveled near 30 miles over the high plains that surround Denver and most abruptly whirled into the canon through which Cedar Creek roams in restless turmoil. On either side of us, straight up rises the rocky cliffs 500 feet high, with but space enough between them at the bottom for the rushing creek to find its way. The narrow railroad steals its winding path from the rocky bed of the creek and the towering mountain side. Just high enough were we that the lashing torrent tossing high its foaming spray could not reach us in its flight. The road is a continuation of short curves all through the canon. It required two engines all the way up, as our train was composed of several cars. As it seemed that the curves were continually so short that we in the rear car were nearer the engines than the middle coaches. We didn't hand the engineer a cigar from our car, or anything that way. We could have done so had we had the cigar; the distance between us cut no figure. Far up the mountain we reached a beautiful little settlement of 3 or 4 thousand inhabitants called Georgetown. Our car had scarcely stopped when we were most unceremoniously besieged by children selling boxes of specimens. A few miles of winding up the mountain threw us as it were in a position far above Georgetown so that we could get an elegant bird's eye view of the little city resting below us. In a short time following up the creek we passed under a lofty trestle near 100 ft. high and so pushing higher and higher up the mountain from one side of the creek to the other we came around and crossed over the trembling trestle that we had before passed under. This round is what they call "Wonderful Loop," and wonderful it is. The civil engineering in the construction of the road is in itself, to be marveled at. Seven times from the ascending position, and the towering cliffs, could we look down miles through the gulch and see the beautiful little city of Georgetown. At last we reached Silver Plume the end of the road. It was quite cold here as it had snowed in the town a few days before our visit and the snow was yet clinging around the mountain sides above the town. Overcoats buttoned to the chin, were right in style and Pres. Pursell was sorry he had not brought his. The town, was well decorated with flags and banners upon which were inscribed "Ohio Welcome." This gave us courage so we took the town and put it in our pockets. Dinner was served and we were not like people that couldn't eat. In the P. M. accompanied by a millionaire silver king, we were escorted through the Mendota Silver Mine and were shown the wealthy vein of silver ore and the manner in which it was mined. Having all collected special permits from the mine cars we groped our way out into the open world again, with our best clothes well bespattered with mud. Nothing was left us now but to return over that towering trestle through the projecting rocks, by the leaping creek until we soared out across the wide plains to Denver, which by this time seemed like home to us.

A Pleasant Birthday Anniversary.

On last Tuesday evening in honor of the 54th anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Mary Shorr, a social party was given at her home by Mrs. Olie Wright and Miss Mandy Shorr. A large number were present, and an abundant festal board was spread before them. The evening was spent in joy and happiness and all left at a late hour wishing the hostess many more such happy anniversaries.

Proposed Amendment to the Constitution of Ohio.

Taxation.

Section 1. "Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That a proposition shall be submitted to the electors of the State on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1891, to amend Section 2 of Article XII, of the Constitution of the State of Ohio, so that it shall read as follows:

ARTICLE XII.
Sec. 2. Laws may be passed which shall tax by a uniform rule all money, credits, investments in bonds, stock, joint-stock companies, or otherwise, and all real and personal property according to their true value thereof in money. In addition thereto, laws may be passed taxing rights, privileges, franchises, and such other subject matters as the legislature may direct; but taxing grounds, public school houses, houses used exclusively for public worship, institutions of purely public charity, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, and other property, may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation; and the value of all property so exempted shall be ascertained and reported by law.

Sec. 3. At such election, those electors desiring to vote for such amendment may have placed upon their ballots the words "Taxation Amendment—Yes," and those opposed to such amendment may have placed on their ballots the words "Taxation Amendment—No."

Sec. 4. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January 1892.

Wm. VAN CIE MARQUIS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Wm. VAN CIE MARQUIS,
President of the Senate.

Adopted April 24, 1891.
J. DANIEL RYAN, Secretary of State.

Office of the Secretary of State,
Columbus, Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a joint resolution adopted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, on the 24th day of April, A. D. 1891, taken from the original rolled in this office.

In testimony whereof, have hereunto subscribed my name, and affixed my official seal at Columbus the 24th day of April A. D. 1891.

DANIEL RYAN,
Secretary of State.

How to Succeed.
This is the great problem of the which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck and the majority from deficient grip—want of nerve. They are nervous, irritable, changeable, and the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirits up," thus wasting money, time, courage and nerve force. There is nothing like the Serravallo's Tonic, discovered by the great specialist Dr. Serravallo, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neurasthenia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria.
